Origins - Cosmos, Fossils and Genes, Mind and Faith: Opening Science Absolutism

© RD Adamson 2017

Origins – Cosmos, Fossils and Genes, Mind and Faith: Opening Science Absolutism is about the discontinuity between perpetual science method and science absolutism. Comparing Secular Genesis (a secular origins account) with Biblical Genesis 1 allows critical user look at both. Since believers have to engage with secular scientific world view, a review of conflicting claims on Cosmos, Fossils and Genes, Mind and Faith is given for realistic opportunity to decide whether loyalty to perpetual science method is being submerged into science absolutism. The various intersections of the 'Faith versus God is Dead' debates are also looked at in terms of the Secular Scientific Consensus and its ideological claims about the dangerous faithful.

Rod Adamson is married to Colleen, they have one child. Rod is minister at George Presbyterian Church, RSA, with B.Theol/HED specialisation in Biblical Studies, Missions and Religions (also Origins Debate), English and Economics.
